SAID TO BE INSANE.

Report That Tom Williams Is Mentally Unbalanced.

(From Saturday's Daily.)
News reached Prescott late last night that Tom Williams, who for the past four months has been employed in the vicinity of Stanton, this county, was under arrest because of symptoms of insanity, and would be brought here today from his home in that district.

Williams is one of the well known old miners of this section, and for years past has been in the employ of various people in this locality. He is about sixty years of age, and the report of his having become mentally deranged is a surprise to all of his old acquaintances in Prescott.

It was announced that Deputy Sheriff Oliphant would arrive in Prescott with his prisoner today.

The details of his sudden illness are not known, but upon his examination before the probate court the facts will be made public.

DEATH PREFERRED TO CHRONIC SICKNESS.

(From Friday's Daily.)

All that was mortal of the late Mrs. E. S. Green was tenderly laid to rest yesterday afternoon in the city cemetery. Services over the deceased were held at the undertaking parlors of H. M. Maus & Co., where words of consolation to the bereaved ones and sorrowing friends were spoken by Father Bennett.

The inquest held yesterday morning before Justice Talbot, acting as coroner, developed the fact that the unfortunate woman ended her life with a shot that penetrated the upper section of the heart, causing almost instant death. The weapon used was a 32-calibre pistol of the bulldog pattern. The position of the body when found indicated that she fired the shot while in a stooping posture, and then fell over on her face. The corpse was discovered in a nook in the rocks nearly at the top of the hill, between a pine and an oak tree, directly opposite the railroad roundhouse.

The inquest was conducted with delicacy and tact, the bereaved husband not being asked to testify owing to his intense grief, which had partly deranged his mind.

The maiden name of the deceased was Eveline Murphy, and she is a native of Monterey, California, where she was reared until her marriage six years ago. Her relatives are prominent people there, and her grandmother owns a large landed estate in the vicinity of Monterey county. Shortly after the birth of her son five years ago she became afflicted with a malady in the nature of a tumor. Money without stint has been spent by her husband during the ensuing years to relieve her, and twice she has been in the hospital to submit to operations, which were of no avail. She was in this condition when she came to Prescott, where it was hoped that the change of climate would benefit her. She has been a close companion of Mrs. C. L. Matthew, wife of the chef of the Yavapai club, who came here with Mr. Green, with whom he has been associated for the past twelve years. For the past two weeks Mrs. Matthew has noticed at times that her friend was acting peculiarly, and on several occasions, upon missing her, has found her wandering in the hills in the vicinity of the spot where the unfortunate tragedy occurred. It was natural that her steps should be bent in that direction, as the ladies were accustomed to spend the afternoon often in the identical place where Mrs. Green ended her life.

They were together early Wednesday afternoon, when Mrs. Green bought some silk at the B. B. store to do some embroidery work, a form of recreation of which she was fond. Evidently at that time the thought of self-destruction had not entered her mind. Then they went to the office of a dentist, where Mrs. Matthew had an engagement. Mrs. Green left, saying that she could not bear to witness the pain which her friend was apparently suffering. Going to the Yavapai club she asked Mr. Matthew for a drink of water, and when she left was in a cheerful condition, and stated that she was going home to take a nap. That evening at 6.30 o'clock Mr. Matthew telephoned his wife, asking why she did not come to supper, and she replied that she was waiting for Mrs. Green. Later on he again phoned and received the same reply.

Incidentally he stated the facts to Mr. Green, and the two men went to the Callery house, where both families have apartments. Mr. Green's room was empty, and upon entering he looked around, and opening a bureau drawer, where he kept a revolver, found that it was missing. Then he suspected that something was wrong, and the two men and Chester Lovelace, an attaché at the club, started out to search the hills beyond West Prescott. They covered the ground thoroughly in the vicinity of Murphy's drive, but finding no trace of the woman, returned to town.

Upon reaching home the information was given them that Mrs. Green was seen passing the Catholic church early that evening. Matthew and Lovelace and two neighbors started out in the direction of the hill opposite the railroad, and divided into two parties, with an agreement to meet at certain points. It was after ten o'clock then, but the moonlight made objects easily distinguishable.

They met once without any result, but at the second meeting the two parties came simultaneously upon the body. The woman's arms were over her face, and they did not know then by what means she had committed self-destruction. A bonfire was lit, in order to guide the coroner to the spot, and the parties came to town and notified Justice Talbot and the sheriff's office. It was not until nearly 3 o'clock yesterday morning that the remains were deposited in the morgue.

The husband in the meantime was in the care of friends, and was in a distracted and hysterical condition, and for prudential reasons he was not informed of the awful truth until several hours later. Since that time he has been out of his mind, and was unable to recognize Mr. Matthew and other friends. To avoid the results that might follow from a prolonged suspense, it was decided to have the funeral yesterday. Last night he was gradually regaining his normal condition, and it is hoped that the crisis is over.

One of the pathetic features of the affair was the farewell note left by the unfortunate woman. It was written partly in ink and partly in pencil on a leaf in the middle of a tablet of writing paper, and was not found until after the searchers had returned from their first expedition to West Prescott. It read thus:

"I am tired and going away. No body to blame. Mrs. Matthew dress Jack. Mrs. Matthew burn up the dirty clothes. Do not tell Jack what has happened. Do not let him see me."

In searching yesterday among old letters of the deceased, to learn the names of her relatives, a letter was found which contained the information that two aunts of the young woman were in the insane asylum.

The expressions heard everywhere on the street manifest a genuine and heartfelt sympathy for the heart-stricken husband in his sad bereavement of a wife whom he devotedly loved. His friend, Mr. Matthew, stated last evening that he never saw a couple happier in each other's company, and more devoted to each other.

The tragedy has cast a gloom over the entire community, and was the sole topic of conversation yesterday, the news of which exclusively appeared in the Journal-Miner.

Sheriff Walter Brown, of Mohave county is a visitor in Prescott, and was yesterday kept busy shaking hands with many of his friends here who have known him intimately for years past. He tells of the best of conditions in his section of the territory, and says that section is prosperous in all lines of business. He will remain in about Prescott for another day or two.

WORK IS STARTED ON NEW HEAD BLOCK.

(From Thursday's Daily.)

Work on the new Head building directly north of the post office on Cortez street, was begun in earnest yesterday. The under foundation for the new structure was laid last year, and was allowed to become thoroughly seasoned through the winter, and is now settled and in excellent condition.

Brick was yesterday being delivered to the lot upon which Mr. Head is to rush his new building, and it is an open secret that he has already received several proposals from prospective tenants who want the lower floor. The iron for the front of the new building is on the ground, having been purchased last year, and shipped to Prescott at the same time as the iron work for the Elks' building was brought here.

While it is not certain whether the new structure will be finished this summer, the lower portion of the building will be constructed without further delay. The plans provide for a three story building on much the same lines as the present Head house, and all the work will be done with this in view, whether the entire building is completed or whether the upper floors are allowed to remain uncompleted until next season.

The new building is to be put up in the very best possible manner, and will prove a handsome addition to the business section of the city. Upon its completion it is not unlikely that the post office building and the present Head house will connect with it through the upper portion, making a continuous series of offices and lodgings with hall connections, all practically under one roof.

For the reason that it is not yet known how much of the new structure is to be finished this season its approximate cost cannot be given. The drawing of the completed structure made by Architect Minor that is to be seen in the store room of the Head house indicates that in appearance it will be very much the same as the neighboring building. If finished on the interior the same as the Head house it will be one of the handsomest of the many god buildings in the city. Hardwood floors, metallic ceilings, and the best and latest fittings throughout will mean an expensive structure, but to conform with the building adjoining, this will be the style of the interior finishings.

Barring delay in the delivery of material, work on the new building will be continued without interruption until the first floor shall have been completed. By that time it will be decided whether the one story will be roofed over for this season, or whether the entire building is to be finished before the winter sets in.

THE COPPER HANDBOOK.

Horace J. Stevens, the Houghton, Michigan, copper expert, has just issued the 1905 edition of the Copper Handbook, a most useful publication, which gives a description of every copper mine in the world, besides an introductory treatise on the history, geology, chemistry and mineralogy, metallurgy, and uses of copper, with a glossary of mining terms. It also contains some valuable statistics on the copper production in the various states and countries. The new edition of the Copper Handbook has been revised, and brought down to date, containing much additional information not found in previous editions. It is an indispensable publication for every man engaged in copper mining.
